MEMORANDUM FOR: Director

FROM : Legislative Counsel

SUBJECT : The Congressional Budget Committees and the Congressional Budget Office

1. The Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974 established separate budget committees in the Senate and the House of Representatives and a Congressional Budget Office. It also set out very precise procedures which the Congress must follow beginning with the budget for fiscal year 1977.

2. The basic purpose of the Act is to provide new budget procedures for the establishment of congressional spending and revenue "targets" and, ultimately, "ceilings" for the next fiscal year within a tight timetable. An important part of this process is the allocation of budget authority and outlays among appropriate committees and subcommittees, thus establishing guidelines for their subsequent legislative actions. In other words, to establish firm ceilings on total appropriations based on a considered allocation of needs and resources. The jurisdiction of the committees, covering as it does "all appropriations" procedures, provides no explicit or implied exemption for either the CIA budget or that of the intelligence community, if it is determined that CIA or the intelligence community constitute a "major, functional category."

3. As I mentioned in my backup paper for the CFI meeting the other day (Tab A), we have, based on judgments and recommendations of our own Appropriations Committees, the Office of Management and Budget, and the consensus within the Agency, made the judgment that we would respond to requests from the Budget Committees and the Congressional Budget Office for substantive intelligence briefings on matters within their jurisdiction in the same way that we provide similar briefings to other committees of the Congress. In keeping with the above, we have already given some background foreign intelligence briefings to members of the staff of the Congressional Budget Office. We have, however, deferred any requests where the information sought clearly relates to U.S. intelligence organizations, budget, functions, and operations.

4. It is interesting to note that there are apparently no Executive Branch guidelines as to how far Executive departments and agencies should go in cooperating with the Congressional Budget Committees, but the basic philosophy has been one of cooperation. This philosophy was reiterated in the meeting which John Warner and I attended in the White House the other day with Jack Marsh, Mike Duvall, Bill Hyland and others.

5. With respect to requests which we have received from the Budget Committees and the Congressional Budget Office, to date we have received, in addition to several informal telephone calls inquiring about "appropriate clearances for access to sensitive information," the following requests:

Senate Budget Committee

27 February 1975

Andrew Hamilton called to establish a liaison within the Agency. No follow-up.
